Hongkong, June 8th, 1998. THE negotiations between the British In dian Government and China relative to Thibet threaten to be indefinitely prolonged. The latest information on the subject, contained in a telegram from Allahabad, dated the 11th ultimo, states that negotiations under the Sikkim-Thibet Treaty are not likely to close for some time as China puts forward new proposals regarding the import of Indian tea into Thibet, and these are now under consideration. No hint is given as to the character of these new proposals, but it is pretty safe to assume that they are designed to so handicap the Indian leaf as to prevent it seriously compoting with the Chinese brick tea from Szechuen and Yunnan. The Chinese tea costs so much for porterage, being sent across the mountains on the backs of coolies, that it could not possibly hold its own in Thibet against the cheaply produced and lightly taxed Indian teas unless the latter were made to submit to a heavy import duty. ment are contending for, and the difficulty of arriving at an agreement must naturally be great, where one party desires to impose a duty which is designed to be prohibitive, and the other wishes to get the tariff fixed at a rate that will enable the imported article to undersell the Chinese product. Whether projudice or sentiment would have little to do with the matter.

her what is known among the Chinese people as a "loss of face," they should not be summarily discontinued upon the annexation of Upper Burmah to British India. In making this concession the British Government were also influenced by a desire to if possible avoid the border raids which garian autumn manceuvres. China has undoubtedly tacitly, if not actively, encouraged across the frontiers of Tonkin since the French "Protectorate" was established. The concession was nevertheless a mistake in policy, a distinct sacrifice of the future to the present, which was sure sooner or later to become apparent. The astute mandaring at Peking have, it would Burma; with Special Reference to her Relations seem, already discovered a method of turning the concession to account. Towards the end of the last century there were protracted hostilities between China and Burma, which seem to have come to an end by mutual consent without deavouring to fence with the request for the either side having gained the victory. The Emperor, we are told, alarmed at the enormous losses of his troops through sickness, had already renounced the idea of taking Ava, and even Kaungton, when the Burmese King Bengturally seek some pretext connected with pynsheng (the Chinese Meng Poh) sent unexpoeted proposals for peace. Kime's International Law Directory, 1893.

Edited and Compiled by PRILIP GRANURN KIME. London; Howden, Rudson & Co. THE International Law Directory has undergone considerable, expansion since the publica-tion of the first edition in 1892 and its utility is proportionately increased. Amongst the additions is a legal telegraphic code, by the employment of which persons having to telegraph on legal business may effect a considerable economy. A list of Intentional Commissioners has also been instried, and increased legal matter has been added to the appendix. Mr. Kime has rendered good service to the profession by compiling this Directory, the want of which had grown up with the growth of international intercourse, and the book is one which ought to be found in every gelicitor's office.

For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of latey ears been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is 13, Praya Central. fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the secents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

To illustrate the vast scope of the work the following fasts are submitted for consideration: VERTISING AGENCY. Chalmers Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English papers published on the Pacific Coast, the Sand. words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese charact wich Islands, Polynesia, Mexican Ports, Panama, other elementary works as yet published, the Australian Colonies, the Eastern States, and quires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which on hand, and all Advertisors, are allowed free 66-F.
